Mill Waters Volunteer Case Study

I started volunteering on the Mill Waters project in August 2019. The volunteer role included supporting the development of the website and web content.

The role helped me to develop new web building skills and it was nice having an I.T. Department to support me if I needed it. I enjoyed working with the team and feel I gained a wealth of experience through volunteering on the project.

After having a career in music retail and tuition for nearly 20 years, it was nice to have a change and support a new community project. The project helped me learn new skills and contribute towards a website that will help people learn more about Mill Waters and how they can access new opportunities for all ages and abilities.

I also volunteer at Ashfield Citizens Advice one day a week looking after their web design and social media feeds.

I would encourage anyone wanting to do something different to take a look at the volunteering pages to find out how to get involved.
