Egis acquires Colorado-based RockSol Consulting Group: a new milestone in the Group' U.S expansion strategy

Egis, a global leader in architecture, consulting, construction engineering, operations, and mobility services, has acquired RockSol Consulting Group, Inc., a Colorado-based transportation infrastructure firm specializing in engineering, planning, environmental compliance, design, construction management, inspection, and materials testing. The acquisition strengthens Egis' transportation market position in the fast-growing Mountain States and West region of the U.S.

Founded in 1996 and headquartered in Thornton, Colorado, RockSol is known for the highest standard of reliability and quality in delivering highway, bridge, transit, and public works projects that enhance safety, preserve environmental resources, and improve communities. With more than 240 employees, RockSol serves municipalities, counties, state Departments of Transportation, and federal civilian agencies throughout the Western U.S.

"We are delighted to welcome RockSol and its teams to the Group," said Laurent Germain Chief Executive Officer of Egis. "This is an important step in our global growth journey. Together, we will bring even greater technical excellence and resources to the infrastructure challenges facing communities across the Western United States and beyond."

Added Saeid Saeb, President and Founder of RockSol, "With an emphasis on quality, I am incredibly proud of what our team of professionals has built at RockSol. Our long-standing business relationships are a testament to the satisfaction of our clients and the standard by which we measure our success. Joining the Egis team represents an exceptional opportunity to extend our legacy of delivery excellence, providing even greater value to our clients and the communities we serve."

Egis has made expansion in the U.S. and across North America its top strategic priority. The recent merger in August 2025 with the Engineering News-Record Top 100 engineering firm Lochner, together with the acquisition of RockSol, marks a significant step in the company's growth journey toward becoming a global Top 10 professional services firm.
