2.1. National Infrastructure Plan (NIP)

The draft National Infrastructure Plan was launched at the Commission’s Looking Ahead Infrastructure Symposium on 25 June.

Alongside the draft Plan, the Commission also published:

- the results of its first round of assessments as part of its new Infrastructure Priorities Programmes (IPP),
- a suite of papers related to the infrastructure needs analysis information included in the draft Plan,
- From Plans to projects: An assessment of how central government plans, funds and manages infrastructure, and
- Getting what we need: Public agreement and community expectations around infrastructure.

The Commission is now seeking online feedback on the draft Plan until 6 August. Within 24 hours of the launch of the draft Plan we had already received 40 responses to our online feedback form.

Media coverage for the release of the draft Plan and Infrastructure Priorities Programme included interviews with Chief Executive Geoff Cooper or additional information requests from the National Business Review, Newsroom, BusinessDesk, Whakaata Māori, MediaWorks, TVNZ (1News), interest.co.nz, Stuff, the New Zealand Herald and NewsTalkZB.

Several organisations also sent out their own media statements on the release of the draft Plan, including Engineering New Zealand and Civil Contractors New Zealand. There were also supporting media releases regarding specific proposals in the Infrastructure Priorities Programme that were sent out by Chorus and Christchurch City Council.
